EDITOR'S CHOICE

7th hole, Vattanac Golf Resort East course, Phnom Penh, Cambodia

Foreword

Dear readers,

You would be delighted to know that Jamal Hossain Mollah is on a mission to earn Asian Tour card.

The 38-year-old golfer, who has shown tremendous consistency at home and abroad over the last two seasons, recently left the country to play in the Asian Tour Qualifying School.

The Kurmitola-based golfer is eyeing his first full season in the premier golfing circuit of the continent, and with the form he is in right now, there is no reason to believe he won't be able to achieve that.

Since the collaboration with the LIV Golf, the stature and prize money of the Asian Tour has increased quite a bit.

Asian Tour regulars can now feature in big-money events, hence, it is prime time for our golfers too, become a regular part of the Asian Tour.

We sincerely hope that Jamal succeeds in his endeavour and leads the way for many other golfers from Bangladesh into a bigger golfing arena.

Jamal gunning for Asian Tour card

After enjoying an excellent season at home and in India, Jamal Hossain Mollah is gunning for an Asian Tour card. The 38-year-old golfer, who started the year with Summit Open title in the BPGA circuit, is going to the Asian Tour Qualifying School as he eyes playing regularly at the biggest tour of the continent.

Construction Of Bashundhara Golf Arena Underway

The construction work of Bashundhara Golf Arena has officially started. Once constructed, it will be the most advanced golf driving range in South Asia.

Bashundhara Golf Driving Range will have an 18-hole mini golf course, modeled after the top golf driving range in the United States. This will be the first golf course with state-of-the-art night golf facilities in any country after China, Singapore, and UAE.

This golf club is being built based on the Castle Night theme.

This driving range will have a variety of experiential golfing opportunities including a martial contest shooting range. 142 golfers can play together in this range. 17 VVIP private rooms, business rooms, restaurants, gyms, simulators games – there will be a whole lot of entertainment in this golf range. Bashundhara Golf Arena will be fully automated.

Various officials of Bashundhara Group including Mr. Imrul Hasan, Mohammad Abdullah Abu Taiyab, Mohammad Amanullah, Nazmul Haque, Mohammad Tuhin, Engineer Ismail Hossain were present at the opening ceremony of the construction work at I block of Bashundhara residential area through milad and prayer.

NAZIM WINS BPGA FEEDER TOUR

Mohammad Nazim clinched the title of the first feeder tour of BPGA at the Kurmitola Golf Club recently.

Sponsored by the Paragon Group. Nazim pocketed Tk 100,000 with the victory in the 54-hole event, which will hopefully hold him in good stead for the rest of the season.

Nizam fought from the back and forced Mohammad Akbar into a two-man playoff as the second round leader, Mohammad Sagor, saw his challenge and wither away.

Nazim held his nerve and came up with a par while Akbar could only manage a bogey. And it was time for Nazim to celebrate.

JAMAL GUNNING FOR ASIAN TOUR CARD

After enjoying an excellent season at home and in India, Jamal Hossain Mollah is gunning for an Asian Tour card. The 38-year-old golfer, who started the year with Summit Open title in the BPGA circuit, is going to the Asian Tour Qualifying School as he eyes playing regularly at the biggest tour of the continent.

After finishing runner-up in three events of PGTI last year, Jamal feels he should be playing his trade on a bigger circuit.

His conviction was emboldened by the win in the Summit Open, the curtain raising tournament of BPGA, where Jamal pipped Siddikur Rahman and Badal Hossain for the trophy.

Jamal carded 13-under-par 203, leaving behind Badal and Siddikur, both racking up seven-under-par 209.

A total of 105 golfers including 82 professional and 23 amateur golfers took part in the three-day event.

"Happy to be able to start the year with a victory. I did well in India, too, last year. I'm pretty confident. I hope I will earn the Asian Tour card this year, and if I get it, I'll hopefully be able to do well on the Asian Tour," Jamal told reporters after the Summit victory.

RUNNER

PLAY YOUR OWN WAY.

The record for the lowest 18-hole score in an official PGA Tour round is 58. That score has been posted only once and it was by Jim Furyk in the final round of the 2016 Travelers Championship. For that round, the course was set up at just over 6,800 yards with a par of 70.
Furyk made ten birdies and an eagle and his putt for a 57 on the final green ran just past the hole. He shot 27 on the front nine and 31 on the back. However, Furyk is not a model golfer – he has one of the most unorthodox (but most efficient) swings in golf. He clearly doesn't need a picture-perfect golf swing to play well. Furyk plays his own way and so should you.

Why is it important to back your own technique and not always chase others golfers' swings?

Two years ago, when Bryson DeChambeau came out of lockdown with a new body and new swing, players soon followed trying to get the same results and distance, but they found this was often detrimental to their own game. Golfers such as Rory McIlroy, who admitted trying to chase speed and increased distance, found it negatively affected his overall performance. The key here is that Rory and Bryson are individuals with individual techniques and actions when hitting the golf ball. The same applies to you – your swing is individual to you and although it may not be picture perfect, what you want is for it to be effective.

How can your swing and approach be good enough to score well?

The key to Jim Furyk's success on that record round was the strategy he applied – he played to his strengths: straight driving and great approach play. Think about your strengths and play to them when you are on the course. Don't try to do things that you have either never done before or that may negatively impact on your score. You need to trust your golf swing and understand where your golf ball is going from one day to the next. If you start the round with a fade, play to that fade and don't try to fight it or fix it on the course – stay with it and trust it. After the round, if you don't like it, you can fix it with your coach.

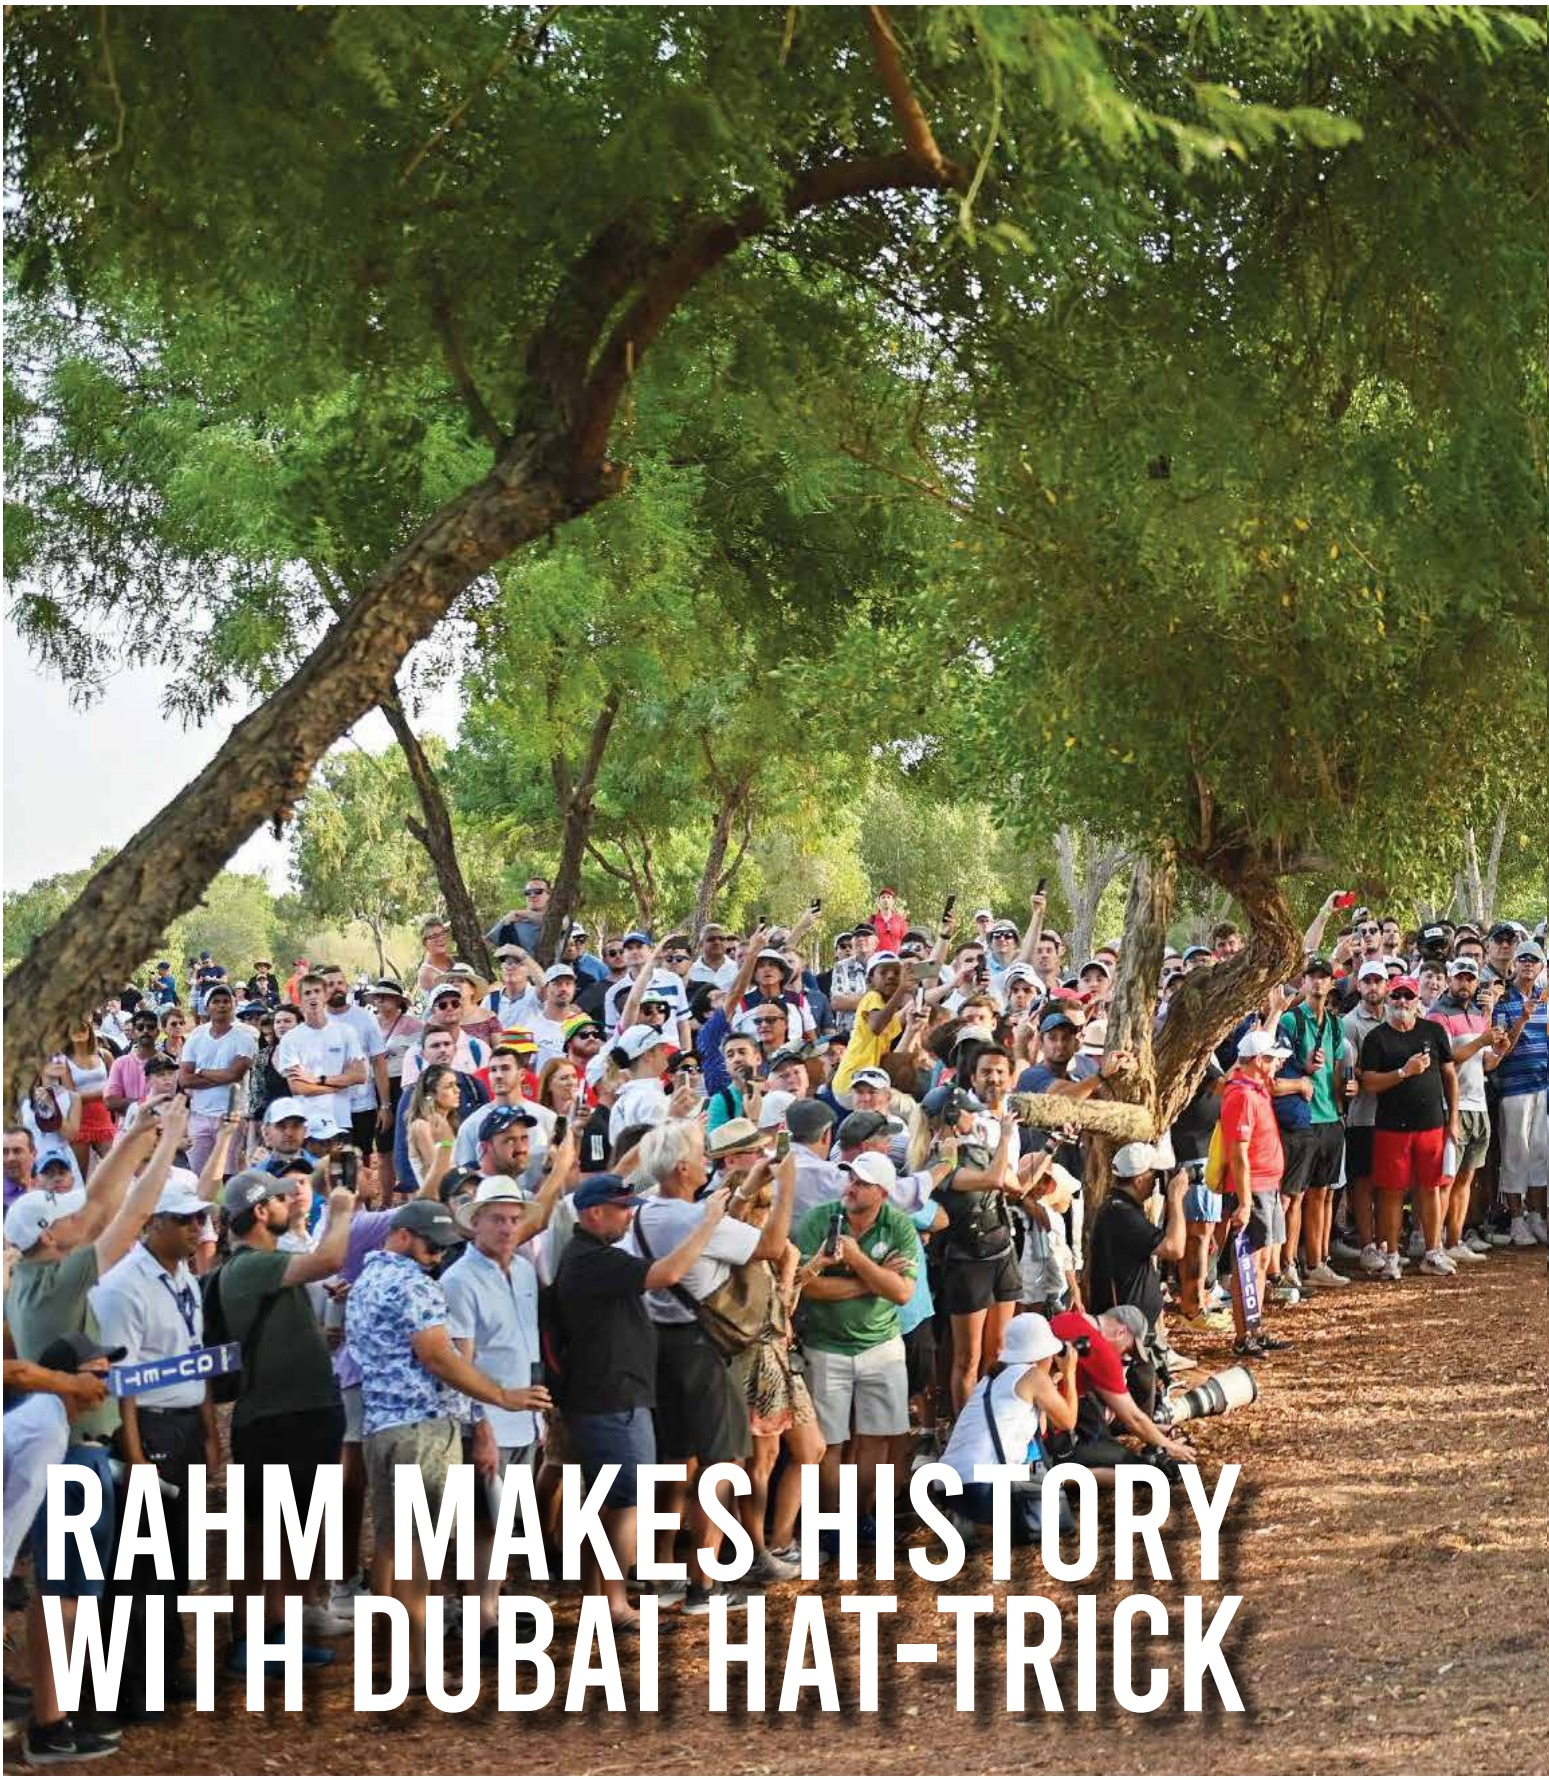
Why is it important to play your own way and play to your strengths?

It may be hard for you to pinpoint your strengths, so if you are unsure, go and find out. Use an app or a pen and paper to collect scoring metrics to identify where your strengths lie. Once aware of your strengths, play on with them and your scores will tumble down. If you are a strong wedge player, play to that by working back from the green to the tee and asking yourself: "What club do I need to hit to get me to a wedge distance?" DP World Tour player Richard Bland uses this strategy, especially on par 5s. He asks his caddie for the yardage to get him to 100 yards as he knows he hits well from this distance.

Why do you need to believe in your own ability?

Self-belief is an internal aspect of your psychological make-up and remaining positive is important to achieve success. However, self-belief comes from within and golfers will often talk negatively about their own games. Next time you finish a round and someone asks you how you played, try and start with two positive comments followed by an area you want to improve on. If we lack belief in our abilities, we tend to look to external factors, such as the weather or our equipment, that may negatively affect our game. We can easily talk ourselves out of a good performance.
If you notice yourself making comments like "I don't play well in the rain" or "I can't hit this driver", think back to times when you have played well in those kinds of conditions or using that club. Tiger Woods once said "let the wind blow" when talking about The Open Championship because he knew it played to his strengths. He had such strong self-belief in his game that he knew he could compete whatever the weather.

AMERICAN JIM FURYK IS STILL THE ONLY MAN TO SHOOT A ROUND OF 58 ON THE PGA TOUR



RAHM MAKES HISTORY WITH DUBAI HAT-TRICK

What are your reflections on winning the DP World Tour Championship for the third time?

Because of Covid, I never got a chance to defend my 2019 title and even though I decided not to come last year, I came with the mentality that, well, nobody could beat me in the last two years, so they are going to have to beat me again. I came in with that confidence.
I like this course and this course likes me. I hope this is the third of many more.

How would you assess your 2022?

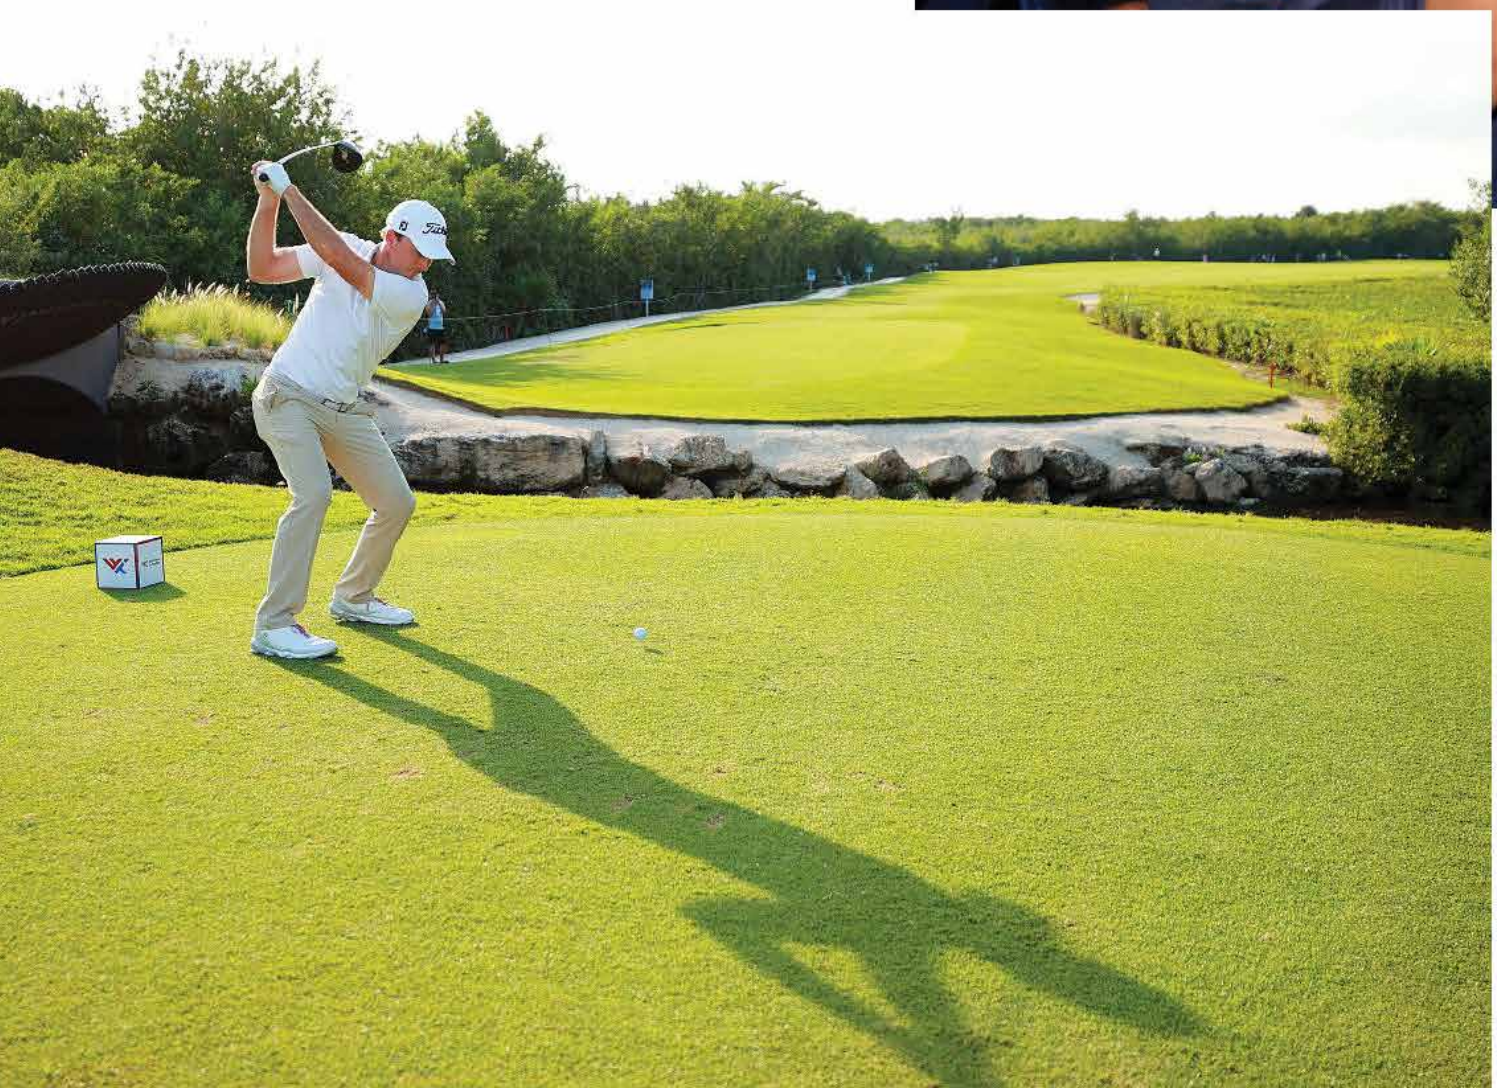
Hopefully people can stop telling me that it was a bad year! Three wins worldwide, three wins in three different continents. Yeah, there wasn't a Major, but it's still a really, really good season. I had a second boy this year, so there have been a lot of changes at home too.

Can you explain your views on the Official World Golf Ranking?

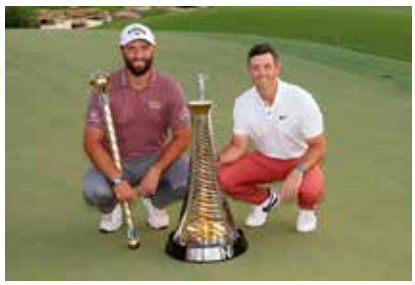
I'm going to be blunt – I think the OWGR right now is laughable. The fact the RSM Classic, which didn't have any of the top 20 in the world, had more points than Dubai with seven of the world's top 20 is laughable. I understand what they are trying to do with the depth of field, but having the best players in the world automatically makes the tournament better. I don't care what their system says.

Tony Finau won his third event of 2022 in Houston

Russell Henley registered his fourth PGA Tour victory at Mayakoba in Mexico



Tommy Fleetwood won the Nedbank Golf Challenge at Sun City, his first DP World Tour victory since he claimed the same title back in 2019



Rory McIlroy lifts the Harry Vardon Trophy after topping the season-long Race to Dubai standings

DID YOU KNOW?

McIlroy won his fourth Race to Dubai title in the same year as securing the PGA Tour's FedExCup. The only players with more DP World Tour Order of Merit titles are Seve Ballesteros (6) and Colin Montgomerie (8)

Talk the Talk

GOLF SHOT TERMS TO LEARN.

Fade

Slice

Draw

Hook

Block
A shot that starts and stays to the right of the target. This shot has no curve.

Pull
A shot that starts and stays left of the target. This shot has no curve.

Lob
A high lofted shot hit from a short distance around the green that stops quickly. For example, over a bunker.

Chip and Run
A low trajectory shot that is roughly 50/50 carry and run. Played around the green.

Fore
A common term used to alert golfers a ball is coming their way. Yell this out if you think your ball is heading in the direction of another group.

Punch Shot
A low ball flight that would be used potentially to go under a tree or into a strong breeze.

DEFINED AREAS OF THE COURSE

There are five defined areas of the golf course and it's always worth making sure you're up to speed as to which one your ball lies in. Where you are on the course can have a big impact on how you are able to proceed under the Rules, especially when and how you are entitled to take relief.

The general area
The general area covers the entire course except the other four defined areas. It is called the 'general area' because it covers most of the course and it is where the ball is mostly played from. It includes all teeing locations other than the tee of the hole being played and all wrong greens.

The teeing area
The teeing area is not the whole of the cut-grass tee box, but rather a rectangular area two club-lengths in depth, with the front edge defined by the line between the forward point of the two tee-markers and the sides defined by the lines back from the outside point of the tee-markers.
You may stand outside to play a ball within the teeing area and whenever the ball is in the teeing area, you may tee it up

Penalty areas
Penalty areas are any body of water or any other part of the course the Committee has defined as being a penalty area. They can be yellow or red, with penalty areas marked with yellow lines or stakes giving the player two relief options under Rule 17.1d (stroke and distance or drop back-on-theline). Red penalty areas marked with red lines or stakes give you those two relief options plus an extra lateral relief option (two-club lengths no closer to the hole).

"WHENEVER YOUR BALL IS WITHIN THE TEEING AREA , YOU MAY TEE IT UP

Bunkers
A ball is in a bunker when any part of it touches the sand on the ground inside the edge of the bunker, or is inside the edge of the bunker and rests on a loose impediment, movable obstruction, abnormal course condition or integral object that is touching the sand. Before playing, you may remove loose impediments and movable obstructions. However, penalties still apply if you take practice swings, ground your club near the ball or touch the ground or sand on your backswing.

Putting green
The putting green is an area on the hole you're playing specifically prepared for putting, or which has been defined as the putting green (e.g. a temporary green). A ball is on the putting green when any part of it touches the putting green, or lies on or in anything (e.g. a loose impediment) inside the edge of the putting green. You may repair damage and there is no penalty for accidental movement of your ball or marker

THE GENERAL AREA COVERS THE ENTIRE ARE A OF THE COURSE EXCEPT FOR THE FOLLOWING:

1. The teeing area
2. Bunkers
3. Penalty areas
4. The putting green

REVIEWS

PING I230 IRON

GM verdict

Ping's i series of irons is aimed more towards the better player, and the range has been newly expanded with the addition of the latest i230. This new iron, along with the recent i525 model, has a fairly broad appeal in terms of its target player. Compared with the i210 that it replaces, which was launched four years ago, the i230 is said to be faster, fly higher and offer a better feel. The long-irons have also undergone a significant change.

Our major gripe with the i210 was that the long-irons were too large and offset, but in i230 these have been slimmed down to appeal more to the eye of the better player while also improving club delivery. At address, the i230 looks sleek and refined but also inviting. The topline and sole are thicker than on the i59 iron but not as large as on the i525 – it slots nicely in between and this look is more consistent through the set than in the i210.

The 7-iron remains at 33° and we tested the 5-, 7- and 9-irons on the Foresight Sports GCQuad launch monitor indoors with Titleist Pro V1x golf balls, before hitting shots on the course to truly immerse ourselves in the user experience.

This iron ticks the box for looks and it does the same for feel. It is consistently pleasing. Even poor swings felt responsive and, through the turf, the added sole camber allows for a brisk exit after the point of collision.

Looks
Visually, the i230 has a muscle cavity-style look and is clean and simple, if a little underwhelming. The cavity badge encloses the elastomer insert very tidily.

Feel/sound
The i230 combines a lively, stable feel with a fairly muted sound. It's certainly more forged-like than the clicky i59, but not quite as dense as the Blueprint iron.

The trajectory was mid-flight and stable, although you can gently shape shots when you want to. With spin over the 6,000rpm mark and a descent angle pushing 49°, you'll have no problem stopping the ball on the green.

In terms of distance, it settled at around 163 yards of carry but occasionally exceeded 165. Not jaw-dropping, but ample.
We had an old i210 9-iron to test and the i230 equivalent was a yard or two longer on average with 500rpm less spin.

This distance was long enough and, more importantly, on or around the number we wanted repeatedly on a tight dispersion. The long-irons were particularly user-friendly – the smaller head compared with i210 narrowed our focus and helped us achieve better contact, while the white bottom groove offers alignment assistance to help with initial direction. The trajectory didn't change much from long-iron to short-iron – a sign of a welldesigned set generating predictable flight windows.

If you want a lower or higher flight or more/less distance, there are also options for power and retro specs.

In truth, there wasn't much we disliked about the i230 iron. Some may want a softer feel, but we actually enjoyed the more lively sensation, getting us out of trouble when not swinging our best. It's very comparable to the Callaway Apex Pro or TaylorMade P770. It's no wonder tour pros are choosing this model over Blueprint or i59, as it makes the game easier while still offering consistency and decent shotmaking potential.

An elastomer insert allows significant weight to be relocated for a low centre of gravity and more distance

KEY TECHNOLOGY

1 An activated elastomer insert creates 21g of weight savings to lower the CG for more distance while enhancing feel and sound, aided by a multi-material cavity badge.
2 Tungsten toe and tip weights help deliver more forgiveness and tighter dispersion.
3 The precision-milled MicroMax grooves deliver consistent launch and spin in the long-irons and greater control in the short-irons and wedges, especially in wet or grassy conditions.

UP AGAINST

TaylorMade P770
Upgrades include up to 46g of tungsten, a thinner forged face and a progressive CG design to add launch in the long-irons.

Mizuno JPX923 Tour
A shallow-cavity iron now with a copper underlay for an even smoother sensation at impact.

Titleist T100
A variable-bounce sole design aids turf interaction, while denser D18 tungsten weights provide a solid feel and forgiveness.

" WITH THE CHANGES IN THE LONG - IRONS, i230 IS RI GHT UP THERE ALON S IDE THE MOST COMPLETE IRONS ETS FOR THE BETTER PLAYER"

Looks
Over the ball, it has a Ping S55 iron look about it thanks to its size, its high toe and the white bottom groove to help with alignment. We like the brushed satin finish, too.

PXG 0317 ST BLADE

GM verdict

PXG makes some of the best irons in the game and, for the better player, the 0317 ST blade might sit at the top of the pile.

Visually arresting, the shelf appeal is through the roof. Triple forged from 8620 soft carbon steel, it features a milled pattern on the back that enhances the aesthetic appeal, plus a tungsten weight behind the hitting area.

Having tested this iron indoors on a launch monitor and out on the golf course, where it really excels is in the feel on offer.

It delivers a dream combination of the dense compression at impact you expect from a muscleback married with quite a springy, energetic sensation as the ball leaves the face.

Often, blades can feel quite dead, relatively speaking, especially when struck marginally off-centre, but this clubhead clearly has a bit more liveliness to it across a wide area.

This was reflected in the numbers, too. The 7-iron has a loft of 33° yet regularly carried the ball in excess of 165 yards. It was as long as most other low-handicap irons we've tried, including some with hollowheaded constructions like the TaylorMade P770, which surprised us. The flight was on the low side, but with plenty of spin to get the ball to stop.

As the irons got longer, it became more difficult to maintain the speed and distance we experienced with the 7-iron, which is why the inclusion of cavity back 3- and 4-irons is a welcome relief on long approach shots.

This provides the extra margin for error that you need here without sacrificing the feel you've grown to love from the rest of the set.

One thing we've noticed on the few outings these irons have enjoyed is that the heads do scuff quite easily, perhaps as a result of the softness of the metal, so some iron headcovers might be in order to keep them looking pristine. Coming in at £169 a club if you buy five or more (which you surely will do given the performance on offer), these irons represent very good value.

KEY TECHNOLOGY

1. Each iron in the set is triple-forged from 8620 soft carbon steel to create a tight, strong grain structure that prolongs the life of the grooves and enhances the overall feel and consistency.
2. The blended set has 3- and 4-irons that feature a cavity-back design, making it easier to get the ball up in the air and increasing forgiveness on mishits.
3. The large tungsten weight on the back of the clubhead is used to optimise the swing weight/head weight target for the centre-of-gravity location during a custom-fitting.

Looks
The overall look is really premium. At address, the three white sightlines, including a thicker centre line, stand out vividly against the black section to assist with aim.

MILLED 14 PUTTER
CLEVELAND HB SOFT

GM verdict

The Cleveland HB Soft Milled 14 putter features the largest head in the range, a mallet shape in a face-balanced design. Milling heads from scratch can be an expensive process and wasteful on the material side, so Cleveland casts the heads first and then mills the important areas, such as the face and the rear of the head that you can see at address.The face has 3° of loft and features Speed Optimised Face Technology, which means it has various crisscrossing lines of different depths and spacing to ensure that speed is more consistent across the face. The lines are closer together and deeper in the middle and further apart and shallower towards the heel and toe. At the extremities, this means more material is in contact with the ball, so there is less drop-off in speed and your ball is more likely to make it to the hole (and hopefully go in).

Of the ten putters in the range, the 14 probably has the best balance, and the size of the head gives it a lovely solid feel. With the head at 370g, it feels a little heavier than others in the range, which it is, but actually this is a good thing for forgiveness.

The Cleveland HB Soft Milled 14 comes with a high-quality headcover and an oval-shaped Golf Pride Pro Only Green Star grip that matches up well with the head and enhances both the feel and clubface control.

With an RRP of £199, this putter offers great value for money given that it features a milled face. The overall feel is excellent while the balance and clear alignment aids deliver everything you might want from a quality putter that won't cost the earth.

KEY TECHNOLOGY

1 Each putter shape is cast in molten steel before the face and back are precision-milled. The sole is then hand-polished to exacting tolerances.

2 Speed Optimised Face Technology (SOFT), is a model-specific milling pattern that normalises ball speeds across the entire putterface for a pure, consistent roll regardless of putter shape.

3 Each shape in the range features a specific alignment scheme and Golf Pride Pro Only grip designed to fit the stroke of that putter.

Rest. Rebuild. Play.

Golf injuries are now more common than ever, but by understanding your golf swing and undertaking a few simple fitness drills, you can manage those little niggles to ensure they don't become long-term problems

On the Eve of the 2008 Open Championship at Royal Birkdale, Padraig Harrington took to the course late in the afternoon to play a practice round. It was the first time the defending champion had played the layout all week, with speculation rife that the 36-year-old was suffering from a worrying wrist injury sustained hitting balls back at his home in Ireland. So when the news flooded through that he had chosen to walk the back nine – hitting only putts and chip shots around the green – his withdrawal seemed inevitable.

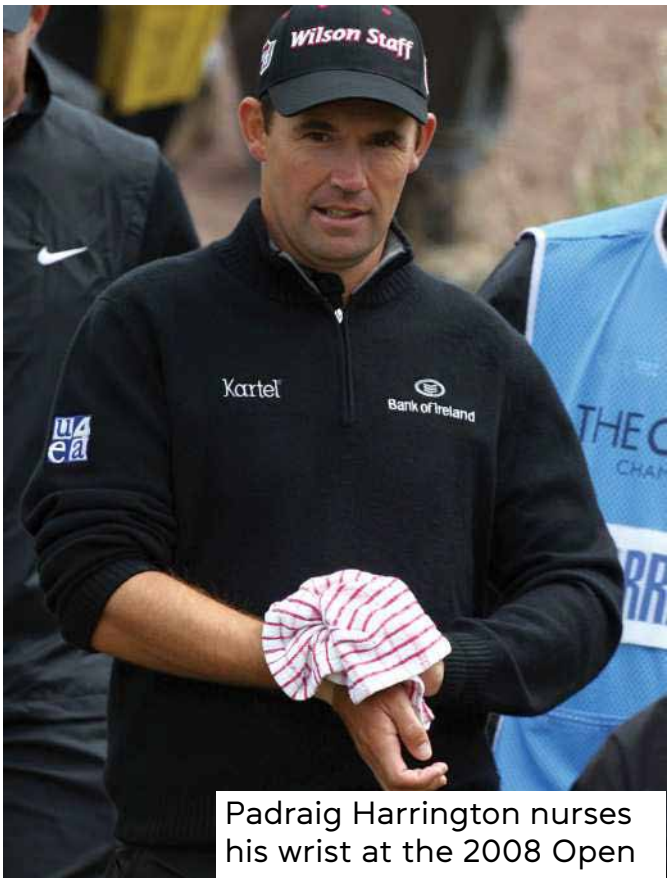
"If this wasn't The Open, I wouldn't be here," he told reporters. "Trust me, I would have already pulled out."

Fast forward five days and Harrington is still at Birkdale and still cradling the Claret Jug after returning a final-round 69 to win by four shots from Ian Poulter.

Facing questions from the media, he is asked about the injury that had threatened to derail his hopes of back-to-back Open wins – before a wide grin cuts across his face. "As the saying goes," he laughs, "beware the injured golfer. We always have a point to prove."

Harrington's approach to playing through the pain may sound somewhat emblematic of how golfers, particularly amateur club players, approach the thorny issue of injuries. Many simply soldier on expecting the niggle and discomfort to go away, whether it be their back – most common – or a hand injury sustained from a poor grip. But in Harrington's case, a deliberate lack of golf in the build-up to that tournament – not to mention having the necessary physio help at hand to rebuild the strength in his wrist – meant he was able to find the right balance that would put him in a position to tackle the notorious Southport links.

Of course, it helped that he drove the ball better than anybody else that week, meaning he did not have to venture too often into Birkdale's treacherous rough.



Padraig Harrington nurses his wrist at the 2008 Open

By staying clear of danger, he was able to swing relatively pain-free. Sadly, that's not a luxury us mere mortals are able to enjoy The top players do this over and over again. But even if you were to look at an amateur, their swing is still going from zero to around 80mph. We are still generating some serious speed. On average, we put about eight times our body weight through our lower back during the golf swing, so there is a lot of force that has to be dealt with, and the whole body feels the effects. Generally speaking, if you are a football player, you will be more likely to suffer lower-body injuries - hamstrings, knees and calfs – whereas in golf you are susceptible to injuries all over. Lower back is the main issue, but knee injuries are becoming more and more common, particularly the left knee for a right-handed golfer. Left wrist, or your lead wrist – from striking down on the ball – is typical for someone with a downswing that is too steep. Shoulder and muscle twinges are common, too, while there are other problems to contend with, such as tendonitis in the elbows and hands, neck pain and foot and ankle strains.

Speed limits

Golf-related injuries can often be difficult to diagnose. But, the truth is the vast majority of us will experience at least one at some stage of our lives from playing a game we often think doesn't pose such problems – and unlike Harrington all those years ago, we may not have the tools to understand just how we got injured and, more importantly, how we can prevent any long-term damage. You ignore the dangers of a 'golf niggle' at your peril.

First, we need to understand the strain our bodies can be put under from ust playing a round. The golf swing is a highly explosive movement.

Tour players are essentially taking a stick from zero mph at the top of their backswing down to around 114mph (the average speed on the PGA Tour). So they're moving an instrument at great pace – in about 0.25 seconds – and then it is going from 114mph back down to zero again. All that in less than a second, too.

Injury pandemic

According to Jamie Greaves, a golf fitness expert who works with a number of tour pros, it is around this time of year when injuries are most likely to strike, as we are put our bodies through different exercises it is not trained to deal with. Practice, and the repetitive action of the swing, go into overdrive. For professional players, they may be working on fresh ideas with a new coach, putting their bodies into unusual positions. They will then begin rehearsing specific moves hundreds of times and the slightest adjustment can have a detrimental effect.

"Players will be putting an awful lot of strain on their bodies," Greaves says. "This is when the niggly injuries come. For amateur players, we see injury increase when they get new clubs. They will head to the driving range and just hit ball after ball, and the repetitive nature of the golf swing, and the fact they are simply overdoing it, means injuries are the likely outcome."Greaves adds that there was a huge spike in club players having to manage injuries midway through last year, when golf courses and driving ranges reopened following the third lockdown. "We had January, February and most of March off, and people were not making golf swings; for the vast majority, the level of practice was very low. Golf then reopened at the end of March and we had some decent weather.

"All of a sudden, people had gone from making zero swings in a week to playing 36 or 54 holes, as well as hitting the range. Many would not have been warming up properly. In sports such as football and rugby, the injuries are often impact blows. But the vast majority of golf injuries come from overuse – around 80 per cent – and that routine where you are asking your body to do something unnatural. The golf swing is not a natural movement which you are repeating time and again."

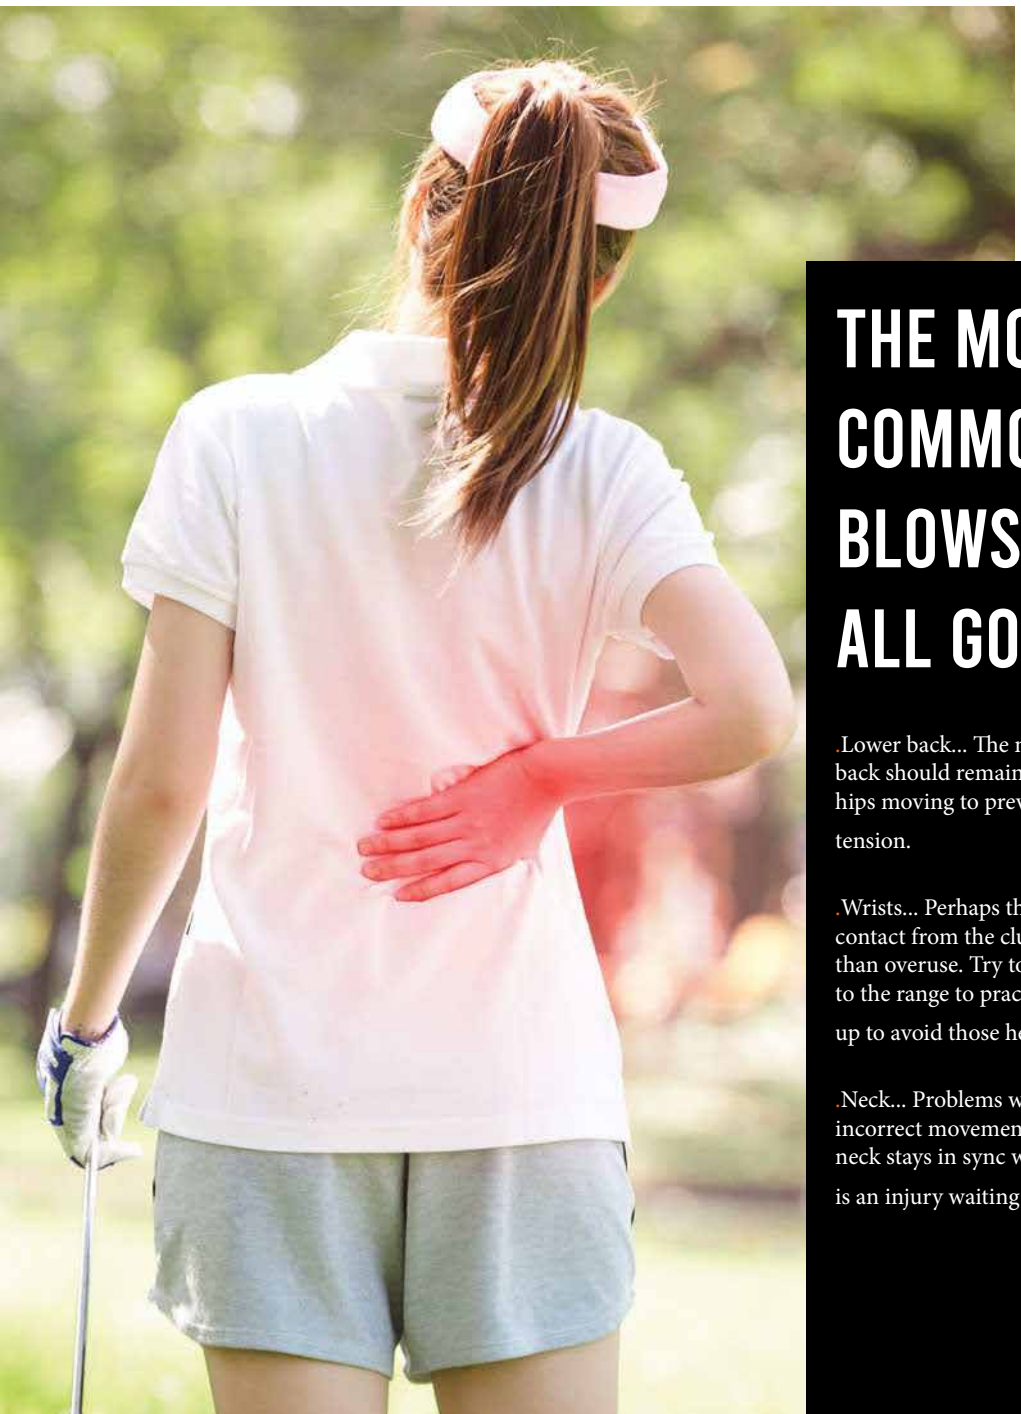
GOLFING INJURIES

Managing the load

So rest is best? Well, sort of. For Greaves, he encourages golfers to keep playing if they can, and prefers to manage injuries and recovery by measuring what he calls 'capacity versus demand' – looking at what the body can cope with and working to that level to find the right balance. This is not just the case for golfers. Take runners and cyclists. Think about it: all those new year's resolutions to get fitter, with people hitting the streets in January. But too many jump straight in and put their legs, ankles and calves under immense pressure. Before long, they are unable to cope, an injury follows and the bike, and trainers, go back in the shed. Good effort, but maybe next year..."Sometimes the load we are putting through the body exceeds our capacity and that is when the body hurts and will break down," Greaves says. "Now when we rest, it decreases the demand. But we haven't actually done anything to address what our capacity is, so when we resume our activities, we are probably going to go over the threshold again and that is where things start to hurt. People don't get into the right cycle, and instead keep pushing. We rest, we resume and then it hurts again.

So I am more a fan of increasing the body's capacity. If you took a wrist injury, for example, you need to reduce the workload on the wrists, take some rest for a short time and reduce the amount of golf balls you are hitting – limit the number of drivers you are hitting and maybe hit more gentle shots with wedges and your shorter irons.

"At the range, you should tee the ball up rather than hitting off a mat because the mat will create more tension, so there are modifications you can make that way to reduce the 'demands' on your wrist, but at the same time I would be looking to increase the strength. Build it up with exercise to increase the 'capacity', so that it can cope with more. We need to control the demands we place on the body to stop them from getting exceedingly high, and then actually build our body up so it can cope with the more we throw at it. It sounds so simple but so many people ignore it.



THE MOST COMMON BLOWS FOR ALL GOLFERS

.Lower back... The most common injury golfers are likely to face. The back should remain steady during your swing, so you need to get the hips moving to prevent too much movement (in the back) and resulting tension.

.Wrists... Perhaps the main injury in golf that can come as a result of heavy contact from the clubhead striking the ground. So 'impact' rather than overuse. Try to avoid hitting off mats for a while, and if you must go to the range to practise, hit half shots and avoid full swings. Tee the ball up to avoid those heavy surface blows.

.Neck... Problems with the neck are usually the result of swing issues, an incorrect movement or poor set-up. Make sure the movement in your neck stays in sync with your swing. Too much or too little neck movement is an injury waiting to happen.
